Peoples Ponderings

When thinking of something to say this week, I noticed that next week marks six months since I arrived as parish priest. It is safe to say that the time has flown by - which is always a good sign. It is safe to say that it is a steep learning curve, going from a care free curate to parish priest. I don't recall during my discernment over a vocation to the priesthood, that dealing with toilets, lights, heating, finances and the sale of property came to mind. However, this is part of the role of a modern-day parish priest. It is probably in these areas that I have had the most learning to do, as I am not a great DIY man or someone who knows the ins and outs of selling property. One of the things that did of course attract me to the priesthood, was the chance to serve God and to hopefully bring people closer to him. I hope that I have achieved this most of the time that I have been with you and deeply apologise for the times when my actions or lack of action have not lead to this. The six months have been challenging because of my new responsibilities, the pressures on the Deanery as a whole due to illness and from being quite a distance from home. This is the longest I have lived away from the Midlands and at times I do still get a little homesick. However, I wish to thank you for all your support and for your patience as I continue to adapt to my role as parish priest. Please continue to keep me in your prayers, and I pray for all of you as we approach Holy Week, which I hope will go smoothly!
