Canon's Ramblings

I spent a couple of days visiting a priest friend in the south of England during the week and I managed to skim read a couple of books which I hope to return to again to read more carefully in the near future and which covered topics that I am sure will be part of our shared conversations as a Catholic community in the present and the future. The first one was entitled 'The Secular Priesthood in England and Wales: History, Mission, and Identity' and is written by Dr Judith Champ who is a lecturer at Oscott College. She considers our present challenges and issues in the light of the history of the Catholic community of this country with the many different factors that have influenced us and continue to influence us today. The second book was called 'Divine Renovation: from a maintenance to a missional parish' and is written by Fr James Mallon. Although written from a North American perspective (I think he works in a Canadian diocese) much of it speaks to our own concerns and gives a reader plenty of food for thought. Both the above books are available from a variety of suppliers on line and are worthy of a read.
